“Coorg”

—Lokesh Abrol

Summary:—

“Coorg” is a descriptive story in which the writer has depicted the fascinating beauty of Coorg which is the smallest district of Karnataka. It is a land of rolling hills and picturesque landscape. It is well known for its coffee-gardens, hills, rainforests and spices.

Coorg is also famous for its brave people and culture. The people of Coorg are supposed to be the descent of Greek.

There is a story that reveals that a part of Alexander’s army moved south along the coast and settled here when return became impractical and impossible.

The coorgis are known for their courage, bravery and hospitality.They entertain strangers warmly and look after their guests as family members.They always try to provide their guests with all comforts. They also have a great environmental sense.They live in harmony with nature.All kinds of animals-aquatic as well as land animals,birds and many other arboreal animals live fearlessly in the dense forests of Coorg.The coorgis care for their surroundings and never interfere with nature resulting in the serene and lush green atmosphere.They are religious too and have deep faith in God.
