READING

Read the passage and answer the questions.

One day, a merchant bought a sack of salt at the market, and loaded it on his donkey. On their way home, they had to cross a stream. Accidentally, the donkey fell into the stream, and the salt melted in the water. The donkey was delighted because he did not have to carry a heavy load any more. The merchant returned to the market with his donkey and bought some more salt. On their way back, the donkey fell down at the same spot again, this time on purpose! He brayed in happiness because his load had become lighter.

The merchant understood the donkey's trick. He returned to the market once more, and brought a sack of sponge. When the donkey fell into the stream again, the sponge soaked up water and became heavier. Now, the donkey had to carry a much heavier load. He had learnt a lesson.
