Ch 5:- The wind in the willows

The Mole had been working very hard all the morning, spring-cleaning his little home. First with brooms, then with dusters; with a brush and a pail of white wash. It was small wonder, then, that he suddenly flung down his brush on the floor and said, 'hang spring-cleaning!' and bolted out of the house without even waiting to put on his coat. He thought his happiness was complete when he stood by the edge of a river. Never in his life had he seen a river before.

As he gazed, something bright and small winked at him and a small face began gradually to grow up round it. A brown little face, with whiskers. Small neat ears and thick silky hair. It was the Water rat!
