The Lark and her young ones

A lark had made her nest in a wheat field. The baby birds were too small to use their wings and fly. When the wheat crop was ripe, the farmer came there. Looking at his ripe crop, he said, 'The time has come for me to ask my friends to cut the crop for me'.

One of the young larks heard him and reported the matter to his mother, asking her where they should move for safety. 'There is no need to move yet, my dear, she replied. 'A man who is only thinking of asking his friends for help is not really serious about it'.

After a week ,the farmer came there again.

The wheat was so ripe, that when the wind shook the stalks ,are hail of wheat grains came rusting down on the young Larks heads.

“If this wheat is not harvested at once”said the farmer .
“we shall lose half the crop. We cannot wait any longer for the for help from our friends .Tomorrow we must set to work ourselves. When the young Larks told their mother what they had heard that day, she said .

“Then we must be off at once. When a man decides to do his own work and not depend on any one else ,then you may be sure there will be no more delay”. There was much fluttering and trying out of wings that afternoon ,and at Sunrise next day, when the farmer and his son cut down the grain they found and an empty nest.

“Self-help is the best help”.
