Epistolary writing

Epistolary writing is writing in the form of letters that tell a story and deliver a message

It usually uses a narrative style and is interesting to read.

The letters may be addressed to anybody, such as a relative, friend, or an acquaintance.

Choose two interesting/important incidents from your life and write them in the form of a letter each. Keep these points in mind while writing the letters.

Write your own address and the date on the top left.

Write the salutation, such as Dear Grandpa.

Introduce the subject by saying what you are going to talk about. Narrate the incidents in detail.

Share why you still remember the incidents and why they are important to you.

Write the subscription at the end followed by your name.
