Frederic Ogden Nash (1902-1971) was an American poet famous for his humorous poetry, of which he wrote over five hundred pieces. Nash loved to rhyme, and he won a large following for his light verse. He published his first collection of poem in 1931, Hard Lines, which earned him national recognition.

Tom Berman (1934-2013) was a world-renowned scientist who specialised in aquatic microbiology. He studied agriculture and microbiology, and was awarded his PhD in 1964. Most of his publications have been scientific but he also dabbled in poetry. The poet was also known to have a great sense of humour.
