'Parents need to be friendly'

There was a time when parents used to be very strict. Even then their children were obedient and respectful to them. Times have changed. Parents cannot afford to be very harsh and strict with their children nowadays. They should try to be persuasive and friendly with them. They should not dictate to them all the time. Too much interference will not be tolerated. Parents should try to listen to their children patiently, laugh and joke with them and share their thoughts and feelings in an amiable atmosphere. Only then can they expect their children to love and respect them.
