Extempore speech

Speaking extempore means delivering a speech without any prior preparation.

Here are some points to keep in mind while delivering an extempore speech:

Your opening should attract the listeners' attention. It could also be a well-known proverb or a quotation.

Mentally arrange your speech in a chronological order.

Present information in a logical order.

Give examples to support your arguments.

Reiterate your point in the conclusion.

Thank the audience in the end.

Deliver an extempore speech on any one of these topics:

Three interesting things in my life

If I could travel through time

What I would like to change about the world

Impact of technology on youngsters

Saving Earth: our responsibility
