You do your homework as you are a very regular student. A friend of yours does most of his homework before the assembly by borrowing note-books from other students. You gave your note-book to him.

The teacher did not punish him, but punished you, as according to her, you encouraged him to copy. The teacher says if you had not given the note-book, he wouldn't have copied. Every body's note-book is corrected by the teacher except yours. Write a page in your diary expressing your views about the episode.
